THE ABSTRACT

This report analyses the internship training which I carried out at Rosa & co in Kampala district and partly in King Millers for a period of 8 weeks and 2 weeks respectively (01-March to 7th May 2022) to fulfill the requirement needed for an award of a bachelors degree of agribusiness at Busitema University putting into practice much of the theoretical knowledge learnt in class to acquire practical skills in the business field. This report is divided into four chapters where the first chapter describes the introduction, background, location, mission, vision, objectives, goals and organizational structure of ROSA & CO.

The second chapter examines the detailed activities I carried out while at ROSA & CO and while at King Millers which included data entry, bank reconciliation, book keeping, banking and supervising wheat milling, doing wheat quality control, wheat weighing and packaging respectively.

The third chapter examines the different skills and qualifications I attained at ROSA & CO and at King Millers during the industrial training as well as the influence of the industrial training to my future career plans

The last chapter bears the conclusion and the recommendations that should be put in place for the perfection of the learning of students such as employing of more skilled personnel's to guide and teach students on how to perform various activities as far as agribusiness is concerned.

The report concludes with the appendix bearing the work plan, photos of me carrying out some activities and references for further review of the activities I carried out while in the field.

CHAPTER ONE

1.0 INTRODUCTION

Industrial training is a method of study used by various institutions of learning such as universities and colleges to send their students to various companies, schools, farms/firms and institutions to transfer their theoretical knowledge learnt from class into practical in their field of expertise.
