ABSTRACT

Dark tourism, the act of visiting to sites associated with death, human sufferings, disasters or tragedy, has gained significant attention in the field of tourism studies. Marketing plays a crucial role in shaping the contribution of dark tourism hence the development of tourism industry and promotion of dark tourism destinations. This dissertation focuses on the impact of marketing strategies on the development of dark tourism, using the case study of the Uganda Martyrs Namugongo catholic Shrine. This study examined how marketing efforts have influenced visitation patterns, visitor experience, and the overall development of the shrine as a dark tourism destination. Through a combination of qualitative research methods including interviews, surveys, and site observations, this research sheds light on the strategies implemented by the Uganda Martyrs Namugongo Shrine to promote dark tourism and analyses their effectiveness. The findings of this study contribute to the existing literature on dark tourism marketing and provide insights to other destinations seeking to develop and promote dark tourism sites.

CHAPTER ONE

INTRODUCTION

1.0 Introduction

This chapter introduces the background of the study, problem statement, objectives of the study, research questions, scope of the study and the conception frame work.

1.1 Background of the study

Dark tourism involves tourists visiting to human sufferings, heritage sites of death, disasters or tragedy (Mionel, 2021) and it was coined by Lennon and Foley in 1996. Components of dark tourism include disaster, genocide, cemeteries/grave yards, battlefields and ghost tourism according to (Agapito et al., 2013). The dark tourist sites where tourists can visit and express their desires to understand the past events related to death, tragic or human sufferings (Bowman & Pezzullo, 2009) at the global level, dark tourism is analyzed as follows;

According to (Topsakal & Ekici, 2014) on august 6th 1945 Hiroshima of Japan in Asia was bombed by the atomic bomb, approximately to 70000 people died instantly and by the end of 1945 the number the death reached 140000 all most half way of the population. The Hiroshima peace memorial museum and park which were opened on august 1952 attracted 110000 visitors in the first year, because of marketing strategies used around 11.5 visitor visit Hiroshima peace memorial museum and the Hiroshima peace memorial park , about 530000 visitors come from overseas (Poade, 2017). Hiroshima was designated as a UNESCO heritage site in 1966 with a reason that after the atomic bombing, the building was the only structure that remained standing around the atomic bombing of Hiroshima at the end of war II.

According to (sheshadri, Raja on 4th march 2016), Kigali genocide memorial of Rwanda at Gisozi where 250000 victims have been buried. It is also called the genocide against the Tutsi, occurred between 7thApril and 15thJune 1994 during the Rwanda civil war. The esteemed number of the death is 491000-800000. However, in the years that followed, dark tourism grew rapidly whereby in 2010, the country Kigali genocide attracted 660000 international visitors who generated US$200 million in revenue although it must be noted that 80% from 38.136 or 5.8%, were non Africans leisure visitors (RDBa, 2014). The Aegis trust attendance statistics show that more than 40000 foreigners visited Kigali genocide memorial in 2012 (Gasana 2012). According to Friedrich and Johnston (2014) attracted more than 42000 international tourist that visited Kigali genocide
